

Dear Colleagues,

Today, Kazan University proudly marks a remarkable milestone in its history. Ten years ago, we turned a new page in the academic life of our university by publishing the inaugural issue of the English-language journal Kazan University Law Review. As we launch this anniversary issue, we can say with absolute confidence: our goal to integrate Russian legal scholarship into the global academic space has been successfully achieved!

Kazan University has always stood as one of the flagships of academic science in Russia. We have steadfastly sought to ensure that scientific research is not only fundamental but also practically relevant — both nationally and far beyond our borders. It is deeply gratifying that our English-language journal has served as a bridge uniting the Russian and international scientific and educational communities.

Our leading scholars, professors, and associate professors regularly present their work in these pages, setting the highest standard for domestic legal science. At the same time, the journal offers continuous support to early-career scholars, upholding the continuity of academic traditions.

I extend my heartfelt gratitude to the editorial board, reviewers, and contributing researchers for their commitment to excellence and high professionalism! I wish the journal continued prosperity, new impactful publications, and further advancement in the world's leading rankings!

Respectfully,
Rector of Kazan Federal University
Lenar Safin